

Integration Point Annual User Conference Provided Information Exchange & Networking for Global Trade Community

Charlotte, NC, July 1, 2008 -- Integration Point®, a leading provider of real time global trade management solutions, recently held Integration08 -- a two-day conference attended by Integration Point clients, partners and others in the global trade community. Integration08 took place June 17-19 in Charlotte, NC, and provided attendees with up-to-date information on topics such as handling the impending Importer Security Filing (commonly known as "10+2") regulations for US imports, managing global trade regulations, understanding duty deferral programs around the world, leveraging multiple trade agreements and more.

According to Kim Taylor, Senior Manager Global Trade Compliance, Callaway Golf, "I had a great time and the speakers were knowledgeable. I was able to take away ideas that will start helping me in my job immediately. I'm already looking forward to attending next year."

Shana Baker, FTZ Administrator for Crate & Barrel added, "The Integration08 Conference was very informational. I learned about products I never knew Integration Point offered, and it was great to hear how actual users applied these products to different aspects of their business. I really enjoyed how the Integration Point staff demonstrated the functionality and user-friendliness of the different screens, thanks Integration Point!"

Other attendee comments showed that Integration08 was not only a success but provided an atmosphere for information exchange and networking for the global trade community. As one attendee put it, "Integration Point has a vision! It is willing to adapt to new global business situations. Its associates are active in the global community and have an insight on what's happening."

"When we started planning Integration08, we knew we wanted to provide the Integration Point network of customers an atmosphere where they could hear relevant topics affecting trade regimes across the world, learn of ways to improve daily processes specific to their area of responsibility, and network with other trade professionals," said Tom Barnes, CEO of Integration Point. "According to the feedback we have received attendees feel that we achieved this objective and are looking forward to next year's conference."
